DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

1. The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

2. Claim 13 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

3. Claim 13 recites the limitation "the mastoid cavity" in lines 2-3. There is insufficient antecedent basis for this limitation in the claim.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

4. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

5. Claims 10-15, and 17-18 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Schulman et al. (6,067,474).

Regarding claim 10, Schulman et al. shows an implant package comprising: a protective housing (112') containing stimulator electronics; at least one electrode (114) adapted for insertion into an inner ear and in operable communication with said stimulator electronics, a receiving and/or transmitting coil (172) enclosed in a protective casing (silicone rubber mold 174); and wherein a flexible connection (silicone rubber mold 174) is provided between and directly attached to said protective housing and said protective casing (Figs. 14A-14B; Col. 16, lines 10-49).

With respect to claim 11-12, Schulman et al. shows the flexible connection could facilitate optimal positioning of the coil and the flexibility of the flexible connection between the protective housing and the protective casing is such as to allow changes in head shape as the patient grows since silicone rubber is capable of compression.

With respect to claim 13, Schulman shows the flexible connection is made from a material having memory. It is inherent that silicone rubber has a memory since it is an elastomer and therefore will revert back to its original shape after mechanical force is applied to the material.

Regarding claim 14-15, Schulman et al. shows the protective housing (112) is electrically coupled to the at least one electrode (114) and the protective housing is electrically coupled to the receiving or transmitting coil via inductive coupling with coil inside protective housing.

With respect to claim 17, Schulman et al. shows the implant package (74) is a receiver/stimulator package and said at least one electrode (114) is adapted for insertion into the inner ear.

The functional language and statements of intended use have been carefully considered but are not considered to impart any further structural limitations over the prior art.

Response to Arguments

6. Applicant's arguments, see paper filed 4/21/04, with respect to claims 1-9 have been fully considered and are persuasive. The rejection of claims 1-9 has been withdrawn.

Allowable Subject Matter

7. Claim 1-9 are allowed.

8. Claim 16 would be allowable if rewritten to overcome the rejection(s) under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, set forth in this Office action and to include all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

The prior art of record fails to teach or suggest an implant package comprising a protective housing containing stimulator electronics, at least one electrode adapted for insertion into an inner ear and in operable communication with the stimulator electronics; a receiving and/or transmitting coil enclosed in a protective case, a flexible connection provided between and directly attach to the protective housing and the protective casing, all in combination with the flexible connection including one or more flexible arms containing leads which electrically connect the implant electronics to the receiving and/or transmitting coil.
